Release day! In a work-a-day world, the use of noms and flash fiction is growing. This post is a little bit of a primer – you can find more information at flashfiction.club. What is flash fiction? Flash fiction is what it sounds like. A flash can last from a few words to a page, depending on what point you want to make. If you cut, paste and edit a bit of text into a Word document to make a short story, you've made a flash. Flash fiction is deliberately structured to make a point, or to show off a skill. This is different to freeform non-fiction, which is also known as 'freestyle' writing. The point of flash fiction In a traditional essay, the focus is on providing information. This is because the topic, with all of its potential questions, is a textbook example of a traditional essay. The focus in flash fiction is mostly on making a point, or making the reader think. It might cover a serious topic (think how many aeon reports on [insert crisis du jour here]). Or the focus might be on a skill – a skill so valuable that it would be unthinkable to omit it from your professional life. The point of flash fiction doesn't have to be weighty. It can be fun and lighthearted. An example of a skill flash. I love repurposing the "Lamest Comeback" meme, and this one is delightfully punny. It's perfect for a work day. 10 Skills to use in your flash. One of the most popular is "Money ball", which is obvious – we need to save to get a better life. But this post is all about learning. So here is a list of skills to use in a flash that you might not know about.

How to write a flash fiction story in a day. I've done it! I've written a flash fiction story in the time it takes to do my morning commute. And I saved you the time and trouble of thinking about it. How did I do it? (to be honest – I don't know. But I thought I'd share anyway.) You probably already know a lot of what I'll say, but glucocorticoids on adhesive strength of reinforced cryopreserved collagen matrix on skin wounds. The purpose of this study was to evaluate the effects of topical glucocorticoid on wound healing and the adhesive strength of cryopreserved collagen matrix on skin wounds. One hundred and four full thickness skin wounds were performed on 24 adult Wistar rats and they were divided into two groups. Group 1: The wounds were treated with cryopreserved collagen matrix applied with glucocorticoid and wound dressings (n = 60). Group 2: The wounds were treated with cryopreserved collagen matrix applied with wound dressings only (n = 44). The adhesive strength of cryopreserved collagen matrix to wound surface was determined at postoperative days 5, 10, 15 and 17. Wound healing was significantly faster in group 2. The adhesive strength of cryopreserved collagen matrix to wound surface was significantly stronger in group 1 than that in group 2 at all the follow-up periods. Topical use of glucocorticoid promotes wound healing. Glucocorticoid increases the adhesive strength of cryopreserved collagen matrix on skin wounds." "♪ I know ♪" "♪ I'm gonna ♪" "♪
